Foreign News.
New York, April 17.

A special dispatch to the Tribune from Paris, Sunday, says the firing was incessant during the last forty-eight hours. The government at Versailles says Paris is completely invested, and that a summons to surrender in twenty-four hours will be sent. There is great excitement in the city, and Communists suddenly allow free circulation in the streets, and at the railway stations, without passport. Most of the city gates are open. Military reports, highly colored, say that the Communists last night against Varannes, which was obliged to sustain a fire against the consecutive assaults on ambulances carrying off the dead and wounded of the assault. The 86th battalion merited medals for their admirable conduct at Neuilly. The combat continues foot by foot, each house having to be fought for separately. The Versailles government troops of reducing Paris within twenty-four hours. Let powder carry the answer. Gen. Edouard, commanding the southern force, says all seems finished. The night has been brilliant, and the battle incessant from six o'clock in the evening. Varannes bore the most valiant assault. The loss was enormous. They were repulsed along the whole line. It was a complete victory for the Communists. Our men fought like lions.

The semi-official journals say that soldiers were killed before Varannes, and several hundred taken prisoners at Neuilly. There was no loss among the Parisians, except Dumbrowski, who is slightly wounded. Free Communists elections have been held, but they excite very little interest. The doctrine of the Communists places all railways under their control and places them under all their communications and documents, if required, for inspection.

Another special from Paris, yesterday afternoon, is as follows: Yesterday morning attacks were made on Porte Dauphine, which continued all day. The quarter of Champs Elysees has been exceedingly damaged by shells, which are still falling thickly. The building occupied by the American legation was struck by a large shell, which caused the death of several persons. The Versailles government troops of reducing Paris within twenty-four hours. THE BREACH OF PROMISE CASE.—The defendant in this case moved for a new trial on Saturday, and the motion will probably be argued to-day before Judge McKim. It is stated that Mr. Wagner's case in this case, including the verdict of $2,800 for the plaintiff, will exceed $7,500.

Two of the jury were in favor of rendering a verdict for $4,000 damages. A supplemental edition of 1,300 copies of the HERALD, containing a full report of the trial, was disposed of yesterday at Franklin and Oil City.

THE AURORA BOREALIS.—There was a magnificent display of the aurora borealis last night. The whole northern and northern part of the heavens, stretching far up almost to the zenith, was of a deep crimson hue, on a pale-green background, while the white fishes momentarily and interlarded each upwards over this vast surface in a manner which greatly added to the beauty of the spectacle. Whatever be the cause of these displays, which are still a matter of dispute among philosophers, they certainly are among the most wonderful of nature's phenomena.

CONCERT AT ST. TITUS CHURCH.—A grand concert will be given at St. Titus Church on Friday evening next, for the benefit of the organ fund, and several distinguished vocalists will take part in the performance. Madame Josephine Schimpf, soprano, and Miss Eichen, alto, both of Philadelphia; Miss Hughes, of Rochester; Prof. Bishop, of Philadelphia and Prof. Lejard, of New York. The latter will provide at the organ. The programme will soon be issued, and the public are promised a superior musical entertainment. Arrangements have been made for running a special train from Oil City, to return the same evening. The price of admission is fixed at $1.00.

TITLE BIG WELL.—The well on Church Run which has excited so much interest the past few days, has now settled down to steady pumping. We paid a visit to it yesterday, and found it in its "gushing" beauty, pouring forth its liquid treasure at the rate of 200 gallons per day. The tubing was completed Sunday afternoon, and pumping commenced at 5 o'clock, and up to the latter hour yesterday it had pumped a little over 200 barrels. The Titusville and Hickory pipe line company completed their line up to the well yesterday afternoon, a pump is on the ground, and was the intention of the owners of the well to commence running the oil at 6 o'clock last evening.

SHOOTING ACCIDENT.—DURING THE OIL CAN-ANOTHER WARNING.—Paul Boudreau, a journeyman shoemaker in the employ of Mr. A. S. Smith, Petroleum Centre, was yesterday probably fatally burned, in attempting to start a fire in his stove with kerosene. He had filled the stove with wood, while alone in the shop, and then poured kerosene out of the can upon it, when it ignited and the can exploded, throwing most of the burning oil over him, and also setting the shop on fire. He rushed all at once into Mr. Miner's bakery, when the bakers seized him and threw him into a tub of water, and thus extinguished the flames, but not before he was so badly burned, from his thigh to his head, as to be beyond recovery. He has a wife and five children depending upon him.

The flames in the shoe-shop were put out by Mr. C. M. Miner and others, who, by their presence of mind and energy, prevented another disastrous conflagration.

The New Well on Church Run.—The exciting topic in our community for several days past has been the new well on the Kerr farm, Church Run, which is attracting crowds of visitors from all parts of the oil region. The well is about eight feet in the sand, and a total depth of 560 feet. Yesterday it was pumping steadily at the rate of fully 200 barrels per day, and was by some estimated to reach 250 barrels. This marvelous development, in a quarter so unexpected, has had the effect to stimulate investment throughout, and all day yesterday witnessed speculative transactions which a week ago would have excited ridicule. While some regard it as a phenomenon, and not to be relied upon as an indication of future successful operations, many do not.

Others predict that it is the discovery of an unprecedentedly productive oil field, and its proximity to Titusville must insure its immediate and extensive development. Certain it is, that Church Run can now boast the largest producing well in the oil region, and we may look for unusual active operations throughout the season in all departments of business affected by petroleum "strikes."

The New County Bill.

There has been very little newspaper or public discussion in regard to this subject during the present session of the Legislature, but rumors occasionally come from Harrisburg that such a bill is likely to be offered, and the neighboring press have commented upon it, as usual, from the standpoint of their own prejudices. The Morning Herald is exceptionally just in this connection, and while opposed to the formation of a new county, concedes that it is better for all concerned that the bill should pass the Legislature and be submitted to the popular vote, thus removing an element of discord from our county politics, and affording the people an opportunity to express their determination in a manner that will end the controversy. We are greatly surprised to obtain so liberal an expression from that quarter, and copy the Journal's article:

It is rumored that the persons most interested in the new county are engineers that measure through the Legislature. We have heretofore hoped that the defeat of this measure last winter would have put the subject at rest for a year, at least. But it is evident that the persons interested in the new county project will not rest satisfied with a defeat in the Legislature. We favored the passage of a bill last winter, submitting the question to a vote of the people, giving as a reason that when the people express their determination in the matter, their decision would be the controversy. We feel confident the question will return to plague us and be an element of discord until it is finally settled by a popular vote. Without expressing an opinion upon the feasibility of a division of the county, we unhesitatingly say that there is no valid objection to the passage of a bill, one which submits the subject to a vote of the whole county, to be voted upon, say at our next general election. We are opposed to any bill that proposes to take a snap judgment upon the people, or even to put them to the trouble of spending a day to vote either for or against the project. Let there be no haste. Give ample time to discuss the merits of the question, and we have no objection to this measure of the Legislature. It is a vote of the people. The region of country asking to be formed into a new county is rich in natural resources. It has already developed enormous wealth, and is teeming with an active, energetic, enterprising population. Their wishes, to say nothing of their needs, deserve respect and consideration at the hands of the Legislature. We believe the people of the county are prepared to discuss the subject as become earnest, thinking men, and that they will be guided by the facts upon which the question is presented. We know that while the people in the vicinity of Titusville have gone on for years, urging the formation of a new county, there are also grave objections to urge against it; but none of these objections should, in our judgment, be allowed to prevent the submission of the question to the people, who alone are to be affected by it. When the people decide the matter, we will put an end to it. Who doubts that it will be better so, than an annual return of the question to trouble and vex us?

What may be the fate of the bill at Harrisburg, we are unable to say. The only serious opposition to the measure comes from Warren and Franklin, and though they may possibly succeed in defeating it, they may rest assured they will have to encounter the same sort of every succeeding session, till the right of the people is recognized to settle the vexed question at the ballot box, as the constitution prescribes.

THE APPROPRIATE.—The audience that assembled last evening at the Opera House to greet the second appearance of Mr. Henri Appy and his new concert troupe, was small, and not at all commensurate with the entertainment given by the artists, who, notwithstanding the disappointing effect of a rain shower, rendered each their part in a manner not to be excelled. The entire programme, which was a choice one, was a treat indeed to those present, and the various performances filled the demands of the most critical of music lovers. The programme was excellent, and who were united in pronouncing the concert deserving of the best patronage of the country. The present troupe greatly excels the one with which Mr. Appy previously visited the city, and we have no doubt a much better house will greet them to night, the occasion of their last concert. Mr. Appy himself needs no praise; his performances upon the violin are marvellous, and show the master hand.

Miss S. Alice Bentley, the soprano, possesses a wonderful compass of voice, and one that is placing upon the lower notes, as well as the highest.

Mr. MacDonald, the popular young tenor, who won many thrills while in this city with the Kellogg concert troupe, sang a Scotch ballad, which was encored heartily, and responded with the ballad of "Jack o' Heartland."

Mr. Hall, in his several songs, solos and duets, speedily won the plaudits of the audience. For years he has been classed as one of the best baritone in the musical world, repeatedly associated with foreign artists in opera, and winning wide acclamations by his individual efforts in concert singing. At his first appearance in solo—the aria "Largo al pastorale" from the Bartorelli—he was enthusiastically applauded, and, responding, sang "Gloria Cellaria," with a rollicking and captivating effect.

To-night entire changes of programme will be given, and those who do not attend will miss one of the finest musical treats of the season.

A GRAPHIC PICTURE.—The Oil Exchange was decorated last evening by a striking illustration of the pending conflict between the petroleum bulls and bears. In the foreground of the picture were two powerful combatants, Taurus and Centaurus, maddened by the oil, and catching brain upon his horns and snarling to toss him in the air. The latter reaches over the crescent of his antagonist and hugging his neck tightly with his fore paws, seems to hold him to mother Earth. It is apparently a very equal and uncertain struggle. The spectators (upon the canvas) consist of three able-bodied donkeys, who seem to have suspended grazing, and are demurely watching the progress of the battle. The painting is of fair proportions, very cleverly executed, and excited general attention and admiration.

THE MAIDEN'S FAIR.

BY AMELIA L. WILSON, OF MCKINNEY.

The following touching lines were written shortly after the marriage of a young man, and though not purely original in style or diction, are printed as a touching addition to the sentimental pages of the day.

A girl stood near the lower mill dam, Whence she gazed on the fresh water stream, And was told on the top of her hand.

O! glorious was that lovely girl, With a nose like a rose and a pair of eyes, Her teeth of the purest enamel of pearl, And one eye so black as her hair.

The time passed on, she had a claim, And was told on the top of her hand, "If I want for a man I'll find him, 'Tis not a woman's part to be vain."

Long at the drink gazed this fair maid, As if she had seen the star-tinted shore; Till at last she said, "This life is but a play— I will swim, if I swim nevermore."

"Mother, I must take a bath," she cried; "For I am, I am, I am a daughter!" And down she dove, a positive dove, In the oil-scented, salt-adorned water.

The maiden, I must take a bath, she cried; "For I am, I am, I am a daughter!" And down she dove, a positive dove, In the oil-scented, salt-adorned water.

With hands and feet, she stole every ring, And was told on the top of her hand, "If I want for a man I'll find him, 'Tis not a woman's part to be vain."

The maiden, I must take a bath, she cried; "For I am, I am, I am a daughter!" And down she dove, a positive dove, In the oil-scented, salt-adorned water.

With hands and feet, she stole every ring, And was told on the top of her hand, "If I want for a man I'll find him, 'Tis not a woman's part to be vain."

The maiden, I must take a bath, she cried; "For I am, I am, I am a daughter!" And down she dove, a positive dove, In the oil-scented, salt-adorned water.

From Harrisburg.

HARRISBURG, April 10.

The conference committee on the apportionment bill are not likely to effect any compromise, the Democrats rejecting all reasonable compromise in the upper half of the bill. The bill is now in the hands of the Senate.

Meanwhile legislation drags slowly along in the House, the Senate refusing to act upon the House bills, and holding everything at a dead lock. What the result of this controversy will be it is difficult to say, but the Democratic party cannot shirk the responsibility for this state of affairs. Nearly a thousand private bills have accumulated in the Senate, and if finally a compromise is effected on the apportionment, it is easy enough to see that these bills will be ground out with very little effort at investigation of their merits, and great selfish must result from such hasty legislation.

The House, however, has decided to take no action on any private bill after Monday next. This may be accepted, therefore, as the beginning of the end, but it seems improbable that an adjournment will be effected before the middle of May.

The Soldiers' Orphan Schools are in a most anomalous state. First, the Senate passed a bill transferring the duties of the General Superintendent to Professor Wickham, Superintendent of Common Schools. When this bill came to the other branch it was referred to a committee, who reported on it adversely, where it has ever since rested. Next, Governor Geary appointed Professor Wickham his successor, who has since been elected to the Senate, and has not yet been sworn in.

Colonel McFarland's resignation was to have taken effect on the 1st of March, but as his successor has not been confirmed by the Senate, he still continues to execute the duties of the office, no doubt efficiently and well, as he had done before, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding.

A strike or suspension of work has occurred at the Lochiel Iron Works, one of the largest manufacturing establishments in the State, employing about four hundred men, whose weekly wages amount to about twenty thousand dollars. The difficulty is not about the rate of wages, but appears to be a man employed as a heater was discharged for sufficient cause, and he, like the other members, belongs to the National Labor Union, which body took his case in hand and ordered a suspension of work, which was promptly complied with. Of course the Iron Company can hear the suspension better than the workmen and their families.

The question of compulsory education of children in receiving attention in all parts of the country, and the benefits and disadvantages are being thoroughly discussed. It is thought the bill lately introduced in our Legislature, requiring, among other things, the attendance at school during six months of the year of all children between the ages of seven and fourteen years, has not been drawn with that caution necessary in such an important measure. It is contended that it is doubtful whether, in our climate at least, children are not more hurt than benefited by being put to books at so tender an age as seven, and many competent observers have declared their conviction that the tasks which a child is forced to learn before its mind is tolerably mature, adds nothing to its mental growth, but tend rather to retard its physical powers.

The bill providing for a geological survey of the State has been indefinitely postponed by a decisive majority. McKim, of Venango, and Stone, of Warren, advocated the passage, and there is no doubt will have been of great practical benefit to the oil region.

The following is an extract from Mr. Stone's speech in favor of the bill: "The laws governing the deposits of coal and iron have been determined and practically applied to many localities, and there is no reason, so far as I am aware, why the same principles cannot be determined with perhaps equal certainty. Ignorance of these principles and laws, as determined by geological investigation, has occasioned the unnecessary waste of much labor and capital."

"Why, in a certain section, not long ago, a geological survey was made, and the results of it were published. They thought there was coal in the vicinity and invested their money to find it. The deposit which they discovered, thinking it an indication of oil, was below the carboniferous formation, so that instead of going down they ought to have gone up. They were below instead of above the coal formation, and a little geological knowledge would have saved the money which they lost."

The oil regions of Pennsylvania, which were some years ago the country for the country, have produced more than one hundred thousand barrels a year, in 1869 produced four million two hundred thousand barrels. Oil during that year was a source of income of thirty-three million of dollars. That is almost entirely a Pennsylvania resource. I believe that but one-tenth of the oil produced in this State is consumed in this State. The carrying of that product yielded quite a handsome revenue to the State last year. When we consider the fact that the oil, when refined, is one of our chief articles of export, and brings into our country forty or fifty million dollars annually, I say that there is necessity for this survey. The State should properly endeavor to develop this great resource. We have never had any survey of it by the State, except for the levying of taxes. The Oil Producers' Association has passed resolutions asking that some such law as this be enacted by the Legislature, and that it not only fully understand the proper requirements of the oil region, but that they are citizens whose opinions and wishes are worthy of respectful consideration on any subject of importance to the State. A great deal of money would be made again. It can be made at, perhaps, a small expense, it is simply necessary to employ a competent surveyor to make a survey, and by careful triangulating, to find out every corner of the State. We have no accurate map of the State, but by this means would obtain one, and much of the labor would be without any expense whatever to the Commonwealth. Besides geological surveys of the Broad Top region, and certain other portions of the coal and iron regions, I understand that the State has the hands of the State geologist, containing information which has been obtained by private parties at immense expense. These reports would do much to dispense with the State nearly one-fourth. I am not anxious to press the passage of this bill at this time, and am willing to have it postponed till the next session, when it will be discussed by its friends and opponents, and I protest against its indefinite postponement.

The bill was, however, indefinitely postponed by a vote of 51 to 35.
